

ROOSEVELT AND FAIRBANKS WIN

Team Chosen Which Is Hard to Beat...Chicago Convention Goes Wild Today.

AGED MEN PARADING THE FLOOR

Roosevelt Named Amid Much Enthusiasm Shortly After Noon--Fairbanks' Name Starts New Tumult of Delegates.

(By Staff Correspondent.)
Chicago, June 23.—Theodore Roosevelt will be the standard bearer of the republican party. The convention has accomplished the act they met to accomplish and the great convention of the republican party for 1904 will soon be a thing of the past. Already the talk of an active campaign can be heard on every side, and Chairman Cortelyou, the new leader of the national committee, is laying his wires where they will bring the best results. Talk of opposition to him which has emanated from democratic sources was swept away by the manner in which he was greeted by his new associates. Mr. Cortelyou is a young man for the responsible position he occupies and has associated with him another young man as secretary—Mr. Dover. They both have the confidence of the president and of the entire republican party and the campaign of the present summer and fall promises to be a whirlwind for energy.

La Follette Matter
The question came up on the floor of the convention yesterday in the shape of the report of the committee on credentials which was adopted by the unanimous vote of the entire assembly. There were a few votes in opposition but these came from alternates who sat in the rear of the hall and had no actual voice in the meeting and were not on the Wisconsin question but on the Hawaiian and other matters. It would be hard to state just what the opinion regarding the La Follette matter to the entire convention really is. Men who have watched the Wisconsin governor rise from obscurity are loath to express any opinion beyond the idea that he will again slink back into the same place he once occupied, merely a cog in the vast wheel. La Follette lost his opportunity. Had he come before the committee on credentials in a meek manner and as a lawyer and a good loser bowed to their authority but respectfully asked for a re-hearing of the Wisconsin situation, explaining to the committee and the subcommittee appointed that he thought they failed to appreciate the gravity of the situation of the merits of his claim, but that he was a republican through and through, he might have become a figure of national importance. As it now stands he is practically aloof from the entire party. It was even hinted about the hotels last night that he was seeking the nomination on the democratic ticket for governor. At any rate he is considered a dangerous opponent to republicanism the country over. He has left Chicago leaving behind him threats and direct insults to the entire republican party. How well he will succeed in his campaign for governorship remains to be seen, but it is certain here that his fight will be a lonely one without the support or recognition of the republican party as an organization.

The Platform
I send a brief synopsis of the platform as adopted yesterday afternoon. It covers the material points that will be at issue and is in the minds of the leaders one that fits the present needs of the country. It is entirely unlike the platform which the democratic press of the country hoped the convention would adopt and is in hearty accord with the principles of the party since its foundation fifty years ago.

SENATOR CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

The Platform
The preamble for the platform cited the fact the republican party has been in complete or partial control since Lincoln was elected in 1860, with the exception of two years. They entered the present period of complete supremacy in 1897. They found the country in an evil plight. They met the unhappy conditions. They replaced a democratic tariff law based on free trade by a consistent tariff. Industry was freed from oppression and stimulated by wise laws expanded to a degree never before known. Under the Dingley tariff labor was fully employed, wages had risen, all the industries were revived and prospered, and established a gold standard, freed Cuba, established wise administration in the Philippines, organized a government in Porto Rico, the isthmian canal is made possible, have enforced laws against the trusts, and built up an army and navy. The platform insists on the maintenance of the principle of protection, readjustment to be made only by the republican party. To entrust this work to the democrats would invite disaster. The democratic reform tariff is always followed by a business adversity and the republican tariff by a business prosperity. To the advancement of reciprocity where it is not inconsistent to the principle of protection without injury to agricultural labor or industry is advocated. It upholds the gold standard and the integrity of the national currency. The fostering of American shipping is favored by proper legislation and advocated. The upbuilding of the navy for the defense of the country and to uphold the Monroe Doctrine, and the safety of the American people is advocated. The attitude of the president, and congress toward the exclusion of Chinese labor is approved. Civil service should be enforced. It believes in making provision for soldiers and sailors and liberal administration pension laws in good. It favors a peaceful settlement of internal difference by arbitration. It commends the vigorous efforts of the administration to protect the American citizens in foreign lands. The policy of McKinley and Roosevelt to protect American interests in China should be enforced. It favors congressional action to determine whether the special franchise in any state is violated. If such is the case it demands the representation in the congress electoral college be reduced. Combinations of labor and capital are lawful, but both are subject to the laws, neither to be permitted to break them. The concluding paragraph mentions the untimely death of McKinley, and commends the administration of Roosevelt as vigorous, honorable, high-minded and patriotic.

The Report
The subcommittee which made the report to the committee on credentials was composed of Governor Durbin of Indiana, Congressman Gardner of New Jersey and Col. E. C. Benton of Massachusetts. They made a careful investigation which lasted for hours and the following is their report as presented to the convention by the credential committee:

UNCLE SAM—MOROCCOY LEATHER, JUST KEEP THIS VIEW OF MY VIEWS ON THE KIDNAPPING SUBJECT IN YOUR MIND'S EYE AND YOU WON'T DO ANY MORE NAPPING FOR A WHILE.

"In the east of the contest for delegates at large from the state of Wisconsin your committee unanimously concurs with the national committee in its unanimous action. John C. Spooner, Joseph V. Quarles, Joseph W. Babcock, and Emil Haenschel, with their alternates, be placed on the permanent roll of the convention.
"Your committee considers it unnecessary in other cases to recite the reasons for the decisions in the several cases passed upon by it. In the Wisconsin case, however, your committee believes some additional statement is appropriate.

Unusual Consideration Granted
"To the contest over the delegates at large and their alternates from Wisconsin unusual consideration has been given by the subcommittee and the full committee. The contest was patiently heard by the national committee for six hours, being argued on behalf of both sides by counsel before that committee, the book and printed argument being supplied by both sides to the individual members of that committee, and at the end of such presentation that committee being fully advised as to the material facts and the merits of the controversy, unanimously voted to place on the permanent roll as delegates at large John C. Spooner, J. V. Quarles, J. W. Babcock, and Emil Haenschel, and J. G. Jeffris, D. E. Hurdan, Richard Myer, Jr., and John M. Koehler as alternates.
"Your committee after completing its organization took a recess to 4 o'clock and gave notice to all the various contestants to appear at that hour.

Roe's False Imputation Resented
"Soon after, your committee decided to take up the Wisconsin contest over the delegates at large from that state. Whereupon Mr. Gilbert E. Roe, who had submitted to the national committee an elaborate argument on behalf of Isaac Stephenson, Robert M. La Follette, John M. Stout, and W. D. Connor, and their alternates, appeared before your committee and submitted a communication from the contesting delegation represented in part by him.
"Your committee, resenting the false imputation which said communication placed upon the entire national committee and upon your committee by its impeachment of the good faith of both of said committees and upon the national convention of the republican party here assembled by its assumption that said contesting delegation could not secure a fair and impartial hearing and a determination according to the truth and right of the case from your committee or by appeal to this convention, proceeded, notwithstanding the withdrawal of said contest by said communication upon the grounds therein stated, in justice to itself and to this convention, after notice to both sides to appear, to investigate thoroughly the facts of said case.

Regular Convention Is Recognized
"By this subcommittee during yesterday, last night and today—and the work of that subcommittee was most contentious, laborious and thorough—and by the full committee yesterday and today, investigation of the facts of said case as disclosed by the proofs, documents, and briefs, presented by both sides before the national committee was made, and your committee also heard oral arguments by the counsel of the contestants to the end that the facts might be fully ascertained and a just decision reached in said case; and, having fully considered the same, your committee reported to be their final judgment and their unanimous decision that the convention which elected John C. Spooner, Joseph V. Quarles, Joseph W. Babcock, and Emil Haenschel as delegates at large to this convention from the state of Wisconsin, together with their alternates, was the regular convention of the republican party in Wisconsin, and that the delegates elected by it, with their alternates are the regularly elected delegates at large from the state of Wisconsin to the republican national convention, and, as such, are entitled to the seats that they now hold in this convention.

"The report of the subcommittee, which also was unanimously approved by your committee, is appended to and made a part of this report.
"A copy of the roll of delegates and alternates adopted by your committee, making the permanent roll of this convention, is herewith submitted as part of their report and the adoption of the report is recommended."

School Principals at Quincy, Ill., Are Victims of Fire in the Tremont House—One Loses Life.

Quincy, Ill., June 23.—In a fire in the Tremont house Wednesday night Miss Elizabeth Welch, principal of the Jefferson school, met death by suffocation and her sister, Miss Mary Welch, principal of the Jackson school, was probably fatally burned. Mrs. Theodore Vallant was taken from a fourth floor window of the hotel unconscious, but will live. Edith Simons, a cook in the hotel, was badly burned and may die.
The Tremont house is a five-story structure and the oldest hotel in the city. The fire originated from defective electric wiring on the third floor and spread rapidly.
The Welch sisters were caught by the flames and smoke while they were in their room preparing to leave for the St. Louis exposition. Ladders were raised to the fourth floor to rescue them, but Miss Elizabeth Welch was dead before the firemen could reach her.
The flames were confined to the hotel building and the loss is $75,000, with insurance of $45,000.

Sibley, Iowa, June 23.—Fred Hokuf, who is in jail here, charged with the murder of Peter Johnson, the farmer who disappeared in February, 1903, and whose body was found Tuesday buried beneath the barn on his farm, has confessed that he killed Johnson. Hokuf says he had been engaged to work for Johnson, but that they quarreled over the amount of wages that was to be paid. The quarrel took place outside the barn where Johnson's body was found. Hokuf says that Johnson turned toward a pitchfork which was standing against the barn and, thinking the farmer was going to attack him, Hokuf hit him on the head with a piece of iron which he had picked up from beside the railroad track as he was walking toward the farm. Finding the blow had killed Johnson, Hokuf says he buried the body in one of the stalls in the barn.

MUSEUM FOR THE RELICS OF OLD

SUGGESTION THAT A COLLECTION BE STARTED IN CITY.

TO PERPETUATE EARLY TIMES

Suggestion Made That an Association Be Formed and Rooms, Library Building Be Utilized.

To the Editor: Why not establish a museum in Janesville? By a museum I mean why not establish a room in the library building where articles of interest might be exhibited, curiosities cared for and relics of the early days of Janesville placed so that the coming generations might see them and become more interested in the history of our city. Janesville homes are full of interesting relics of the early days, of war times of curiosities from foreign lands, Indian relics picked up in neighboring fields and many strange things that would interest many if they were brought together into one room and placed on exhibition. Without a doubt many of the people who have these relics in their homes would be glad to loan them for such an exhibit where they would be properly cared for and preserved and it would be a great benefit to the citizens and visitors to have such a room established. Madison has its historical rooms and the G. A. R. rooms where curiosities from all over are on exhibition. Why not Janesville?

Of Much Interest. Janesville is historically an interesting spot. Surely the gathering together of the relics of the early settlers, old pictures, old chairs, invitations to early functions, early commissions in the militia, Indian axes, arrowheads, stone bowls, pictures of early Janesville, clippings from newspapers announcing events of interest, relics of the civil war and of the blackback fights, all these would be invaluable in time and as the years go on would be added to gradually until an excellent collection would be on exhibition. Janesville was one of the early settlements of the state. At one time it promised to be even greater than Milwaukee and in an early day there was much rivalry between this city and Madison as to the location of the state capital. All these facts were recorded in these early days and posters calling for mass meetings in the fifties and late forties are in many homes, unknown to the present generation. Why not gather them all into one room where they may be properly preserved.

Think It Over. I wish this matter could be thought over carefully. Any plans or suggestions of this nature should be made to the library board, several of whose members I have talked with and favor the plan. The upper floor of the library building is available for such a purpose and while the question of cases suitable for such exhibits would cost a trifle this obstacle I am sure could be done away with by the formation of a Janesville Museum Association or Historical society who would have charge of the rooms and exhibits and whose members would each be assessed a trifle to purchase cases and such material as would be needed to make a presentable museum. The start would doubtless be small, but the results in a short time I am sure would be worth the effort.

A HISTORIAN.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS FOR ATHLETIC PARK

Stockholders Decided To Make Necessary Repairs—Work Commenced.

Work of repairing and refitting the Athletic Park was commenced yesterday and the entire park will be given a general overhauling. The grand stand will be rebuilt and will have a seating capacity of one hundred more than the old structure, more bleachers will be put up, the fences repaired and only one gate will be used as an entrance. The grand stand will be covered with canvas instead of boards, as heretofore, the back and side fences will also be strong with canvas about ten feet high. The park is in a very bad condition of late, and the stockholders at their last meeting decided that a general overhauling was needed, and the work is now well under way.

NEW NOVELTIES IN FIREWORKS

Young America Will Not Lack for Excitement This Year, Despite Ban on Toy Pistol

A large assortment of new and freakish fireworks has been provided for the celebration of July 4 this year. Water fireworks, aerial effects, fountain, new double-action rockets and roman candles capable of startling effects have been placed on the market. Even if the Janesville council and the police are determined that the toy pistol and cannon cracker must go, there will be plenty of amusement for Young America. Japan is responsible for some of the novelties, especially in the line of daylight fireworks. These are designed especially for women and children and are fired from mortars placed on the ground. A shell rises several hundred feet, explodes and throws out great figures of fish, birds, flowers and other objects and representations of a thunderstorm. These figures differ from the balloons.

Balloons will be used in an improved form this year. They have been perfected so that there is not the danger of their catching fire. In rockets there are many new designs. The principal one is known as the telescopic repeating rocket. When it has reached a certain height, it shoots forth four smaller rockets. From each come clusters of flowers, stars and serpents. The Japanese have offered another novelty here in their fiery rocket. The rocket launches forth floating batteries and foundations which remain stationary in the air while streams of stars and fire pour from them.

The balloon rocket is a mammoth affair. It hangs out seven balloons when it has reached a certain height. All rockets used this year will have more colors than ever before. Water fireworks, well known in Janesville, will be better than ever. When lighted properly and thrown into the water they burn and show combinations of colors. Many assume shapes of animals and fishes. Others are sea serpents and still others volcanoes, fountains and torpedoes. The meteor candle is the principal innovation in the roman candle line. Burning balls are thrown out in rapid succession, forming a chain of fiery orbs.

The principal innovation is the electric Niagara waterfall. The dragon nest is something else strictly new.

GOLD DUST TWINS NOT IN PARADE

Two Local Business Men Turn Down Lucrative Offer From The N. K. Fairbanks Co.

The N. K. Fairbanks Co., the manufacturers of Gold Dust and the originators of the far famed Gold Dust Twins, have most certainly heard of and closely watched the preparations for Janesville's Fourth of July celebration, for the other day two local business men who are not famous for their "skinnyness" received an offer in money if they would appear in the industrial parade as the Gold Dust Twins. Their costumes and conveyance would be furnished, but they turned down the offer.

MILTIMORE TOOK ALL PRECAUTION

Witnesses Before Coroner's Jury in Chicago Uphold Man Who Lost His Life in Sewer Disaster.

Although it found that the placing of gasoline torches in the thirty-ninth street sewer caused explosions that killed four men, including Guy Miltimore, a city engineer in charge of the work, the verdict brought in by the coroner's jury in Chicago yesterday fails to fix the responsibility for the disaster on June 11 on any person. In the testimony before the jury Michael McGuire, a workman who escaped serious injury in the explosion, said that lighted torches were hung in the sewer from the manhole covers at Halsted street and Emerald and Union avenues all Wednesday previous to the accident. He never had been warned of the danger of taking a light into a sewer. W. S. McFarquhar, a civil engineer employed by the city, testified that Miltimore was the most careful man he ever knew. He said that for four days previous to the disaster into the well torches had been placed in the sewer in Union and Emerald avenues to see if there was any gas. It was his opinion that the explosion really occurred at Emerald avenue in a manhole where a gasoline torch had been placed and that the force of the explosion killed the men at the extreme west end of the sewer. Miltimore was an expert in the matter of sewers," said McGuire. "He knew every inch of them and at the time of his death was preparing a paper to be read at the meeting of civil engineers on the sewer system of Chicago. One of the sensational newspapers of Chicago attempted recently to fix some of the blame for the disaster on the unfortunate engineer who lost his life. The testimony of his associates is therefore most gratifying to C. K. Miltimore of this city, an uncle of the deceased, and other relatives. The late Guy Miltimore was a graduate of the university of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and later of the engineering department of the University of Illinois at Champaign.

"The secrets are guarded so zealously by the Hindoo that life if necessary is demanded of him who dares to divulge any of them. The advice I give as a result of my researches is naturally of much value; there is no need for anyone to be unhappy or unsuccessful if my advice is sought and heeded. There are plenty of clairvoyants so-called traveling the country and any number of them make claims of practicing Hindoo occult mysteries, but they are not fulfilling their claims simply because they have not the knowledge, neither they secure it. I can tell just what may be expected and what is best done for individual interests, in fact, can render assistance of untold value."

"What of some of your experiences?" was asked.

"Well, if I should commence to enumerate the various peculiar occurrences, some of them of great satisfaction to me because I was able to lighten the burden of trouble, to open the path to success or to enable the applicant to use a latent force of nature for their own good. If I should begin the narrative it would take me a good share of the day and even then I could not finish."

"One remarkable incident occurred two years ago in Denver, Col., comes to my mind quite forcibly. A wealthy woman came to me one day for advice on a subject which belonged to the police by rights—but for certain reasons could not be made public. She was a tall handsome woman of fine figure and intellectual force, a person who would command respect anywhere."

"Some few years prior to her visit to my office her husband who was a mine owner and a man of wealth, was killed at one of his mines while descending a shaft on an inspecting tour. It was supposed, in fact, appearances indicated that he had met his death because of the falling of loose earth and stones down on him from above during the descent of the car in which he was the only occupant. Later, however, it developed that he had been shot first and the dirt and stones thrown into the car intentionally in order to cover the crime."

"Nobody knew of this last fact but herself and she became aware of the facts through the admission of guilt by the murderer himself. The fiend had born a grudge of long standing against the man he killed and later on sent a note secretly to the widow demanding money or of doing away with her as he had the husband. He threatened her with instant death should she divulge the secret to the authorities and shadowed her every move. This the lady told me during her visit to my office. She sought advice and I was able to apprehend the murderer and cause his arrest and conviction without further worry or harm to the lady. Of course the events became public although neither myself or the lady ever figured in the final chapter."

"Since coming here I have located lost diamonds for one party, also thousands of dollars, for a well known farmer living near Afton and I am not afraid to give his name. He says: 'My name is Henry W. Clark, and I live near Afton. I called upon Prof. Carlton at 55 Dodge street to have a clairvoyant reading that he advertised for fifty cents with a doubt in my mind that he could call me by name, but he did, and what's more he told me my age and correct date of birth and told me there was valuable buried treasures on my farm. I asked him what it would cost to locate what he had told me about. He set his price; I paid him with the understanding if he failed he was to refund me the money, but thank God he did not fail, and done as he agreed and the results are I am on my way now to St. Louis with my wife to see

EVERYTHING THAT IS SUPERNATURAL

Professor Carlton Tells of the Many Wonders He Has Performed While in Janesville.

"Yes; I have many experiences and some laughable occurrences as well, with people who come to consult me," said Prof. Carlton to the newspaper man. "They seem to think I perform miracles and while many of the helps I give people for future benefit and the information I impart for present needs seem little short of wonderful, it is really the natural forces awakened within themselves which gives a secret power to remove the cause of any trouble, influence, unhappiness, disease, poverty, failure, or bad luck that surrounds them."

"That force is so potent (and by the way each and every one of us is endowed with it) that thought, actions, habits or intentions of anyone can be changed secretly, even miles away."

"Can you awaken this force in everyone, Professor?"

"I never have seen the person yet in whom I could not awaken nature's force. The occult mysteries of the Hindoo and a deep knowledge of their peculiar powers and weird beliefs, founded on teachings dating back to almost the beginning of the world, give me the power to awaken the mysterious forces of the human being. I have studied the wonderful hidden secrets of the Hindoo for a number of years and was enabled through influence of high degree to secure knowledge never before imparted to any but natives of the country so long famous for its occult science."

"The secrets are guarded so zealously by the Hindoo that life if necessary is demanded of him who dares to divulge any of them. The advice I give as a result of my researches is naturally of much value; there is no need for anyone to be unhappy or unsuccessful if my advice is sought and heeded. There are plenty of clairvoyants so-called traveling the country and any number of them make claims of practicing Hindoo occult mysteries, but they are not fulfilling their claims simply because they have not the knowledge, neither they secure it. I can tell just what may be expected and what is best done for individual interests, in fact, can render assistance of untold value."

"What of some of your experiences?" was asked.

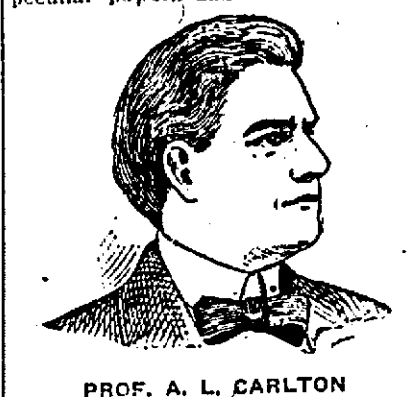

"Well, if I should commence to enumerate the various peculiar occurrences, some of them of great satisfaction to me because I was able to lighten the burden of trouble, to open the path to success or to enable the applicant to use a latent force of nature for their own good. If I should begin the narrative it would take me a good share of the day and even then I could not finish."

"One remarkable incident occurred two years ago in Denver, Col., comes to my mind quite forcibly. A wealthy woman came to me one day for advice on a subject which belonged to the police by rights—but for certain reasons could not be made public. She was a tall handsome woman of fine figure and intellectual force, a person who would command respect anywhere."

"Some few years prior to her visit to my office her husband who was a mine owner and a man of wealth, was killed at one of his mines while descending a shaft on an inspecting tour. It was supposed, in fact, appearances indicated that he had met his death because of the falling of loose earth and stones down on him from above during the descent of the car in which he was the only occupant. Later, however, it developed that he had been shot first and the dirt and stones thrown into the car intentionally in order to cover the crime."

"Nobody knew of this last fact but herself and she became aware of the facts through the admission of guilt by the murderer himself. The fiend had born a grudge of long standing against the man he killed and later on sent a note secretly to the widow demanding money or of doing away with her as he had the husband. He threatened her with instant death should she divulge the secret to the authorities and shadowed her every move. This the lady told me during her visit to my office. She sought advice and I was able to apprehend the murderer and cause his arrest and conviction without further worry or harm to the lady. Of course the events became public although neither myself or the lady ever figured in the final chapter."

"Since coming here I have located lost diamonds for one party, also thousands of dollars, for a well known farmer living near Afton and I am not afraid to give his name. He says: 'My name is Henry W. Clark, and I live near Afton. I called upon Prof. Carlton at 55 Dodge street to have a clairvoyant reading that he advertised for fifty cents with a doubt in my mind that he could call me by name, but he did, and what's more he told me my age and correct date of birth and told me there was valuable buried treasures on my farm. I asked him what it would cost to locate what he had told me about. He set his price; I paid him with the understanding if he failed he was to refund me the money, but thank God he did not fail, and done as he agreed and the results are I am on my way now to St. Louis with my wife to see the exposition and furthermore I never intend to till the soil again, for I have money enough to last me as long as I live and live happy without work and if Prof. Carlton is ever in need of a friend he won't have to look any farther than me."

"Such occurrences as these," said Prof. Carlton, "and unsolicited testimonials have done much to convince people that I can do all I promise for them."

WITHDRAW FROM THE TRIANGULAR

LOCAL UNIONS WILL NOT JOIN BELOIT AND ROCKFORD

IN LABOR DAY CELECRATION

Plan for a Big Day at Home This Year—To Invite Here Unions of Seven Neighboring Cities.

By a vote of 42 to 12 last evening the Janesville Trades Council decided not to participate in the triangular Labor day celebration which was to be held at Rockford this year. Instead it was the verdict of the meeting that the day should be appropriately observed in Janesville and that the unions of Edgerton, Watertown, Stoughton, Evansville, Madison, and Orfordville should be invited to take part. No further plans were definitely decided upon but if the response to the invitations are favorable there will be a big parade with a thousand or more men in line, public addresses, a big picnic, and a dance in the evening. Labor day this year comes on Monday, September 5.

DOG LICENSE LAW IS NOW IN FORCE

Owners of Pets Are Securing the Licenses and Tags Today—Little Grumbling So Far.

At twenty-five minutes after eleven o'clock this morning City Clerk Badger secured the affidavit certifying the publication in three successive issues of the official paper of the ordinance to prevent dogs running at large in the city of Janesville and that measure became a law. Dogs without tags will now traverse the streets at their peril. Many owners have already secured the licenses and tags and the clerk expects to be busy with this line of work for several days. "What about puppies?" inquired one interested party this morning. "They will be unsafe if allowed to roam, the same as the older ones," was the ruling of the clerk.

VERDICT OF THE PARTY
The republican national convention in session June 22, 1904, adopted by unanimous vote, the following sentiment, contained in the report of the committee on credentials, after a thorough investigation of the Wisconsin contest:
"Your committee report it to be their final judgment and unanimous decision that the convention which elected John C. Spooner, Joseph V. Quarles, Joseph W. Babcock and Emil Baensch, as delegates-at-large, together with their alternates, was the regular convention of the republican party in Wisconsin."
This is the highest authority in the party, and the decision ought to satisfy every loyal republican in the state.

CAMPAIGN ISSUES.

Roosevelt is nominated. From now on the wage of battle will be heard from north to south, from east to west. The great right of franchise, the birth right of the American people, will be appealed to at the polls next November for another four years. The heads of the republican party, the wise men of the tribe of Lincoln, Grant, McKinley and Roosevelt have accomplished their work. In the building which stands on the same ground where for many years stood the famous Libby prison they met in their deliberations. From now on the democrats will be the aggressors. Suppose they should make a personal campaign against Roosevelt as they now talk of. Will not his character and the character of the men who surround him be strong enough to answer any charges which may be brought. Ellihu Root sounded the key note of the campaign in his masterful speech. We will meet the democrats squarely on the proposition of Roosevelt and Roosevelt's administration. The Chicago Tribune says of the situation:
"In the campaign the Roosevelt issue will probably be subdivided in the following manner:

1. Roosevelt's personality.
 - (a) His honesty.
 - (b) His fearlessness.
 - (c) His virility.
2. The Roosevelt administration at home.
 - (a) The settlement of the coal strike.
 - (b) Reciprocity with Cuba.
 - (c) The Northern Securities case.
 - (d) The postoffice prosecutions.
 - (e) The increase in the navy.
 - (f) The extension of self-government in the Philippines.
3. The Roosevelt administration abroad.
 - (a) The astute management of the Venezuela case, which caused the withdrawal of Great Britain, Germany, and Italy from Venezuela and the strengthening of the Monroe doctrine.
 - (b) The opening of three ports in China and Korea to American trade in the face of the most skillful and adroit diplomacy of Russia, Germany and France.
 - (c) The peaceful settlement of the 7 Alaska boundary question.

the American claim being sustained.

(d) The ratification of the Panama canal treaty, and the practical beginning of work on the great ditch.

Since it is probable that the foregoing record will appeal strongly to the gratitude and pride of the average American, the democrats do not seem to display the greatest political wisdom in choosing it as the issue of the campaign. Perhaps, however, they are making a virtue of necessity, realizing that if they do not voluntarily make the Roosevelt administration their issue the republicans will force that issue upon them.

WHO ARE THE BOLTERS?

By the power given it by the National Republican party the National Committee has decided adversely on the claims of Governor La Follette and his three companions as delegates at large of the republicans of Wisconsin at the national convention. Threats to carry the matter before the committee on credentials and even onto the floor of the convention have been but empty murmurings. Instead the whole republican party has been insulted by the Wisconsin factionists angry at their well merited defeat and they have left Chicago and the republican convention in anger. They have not fought for any great national principle but for the continuation and domination of a one man power. They have placed themselves above the precepts of the republican party of the United States and have claimed that the committee of men chosen from all parts of this country were prejudiced against their claims before they were presented and in a direct insult to the members of the credential committee withdrew their claims for seats and went away with the threat that they would leave it to the voters of Wisconsin to decide. A veiled threat which can be taken either as a direct defiance to the national republican party or merely as the mutterings of a disgruntled assembly of men who can see no right in any one who thinks opposite to their own ideas. All talk of compromise and settlement is over. It will be a fight to the finish and the result next November can only be waited with patience. Yet to each one belongs some responsibility. To Wisconsin belongs the right of the origin of the republican party. Fifty years ago the first state convention of the republican party was held in Madison and a platform was adopted. The party has grown. It is now the controlling element in the United States. The party of Lincoln, of Grant, of McKinley, and of Roosevelt is strong and mighty. It remains with a faction of this party supported by individuals to break this long chain of historic deeds and turn the state of Wisconsin back to its course into a democratic or a socialistic community that the will of one man be satisfied. To each individual voter belongs the responsibility of the election next November. The right of franchise belongs to every voter and such a right should be a sacred trust and not at the control of ambition of individual over a party as strong as and as mighty as the republican party.

That national committee on credentials went over the credentials of La Follette and his three friends and decided that they were not the representatives of the republican party of Wisconsin.

This talk about the leaders of the republican party being at odds with Roosevelt is all talk. The Free Press likes to make much of it as do all the democratic papers.

They looped the gap and did many other strange and weird features at the circus but just the same as the old one ring, wagon show was the kind.

The Ringlings' show has usually been noted for the lack of the accompanying evils but the present visit has dispelled such visions of peace and innocence.

Some one will have to hunt another name to run under on the official ballot next fall and it will not be Mr. Cook.

Personal ambition often gets a severe shock when one finds what the world at large thinks of a plain individual.

After abusing the entire republican party from stem to stern the Free Press still calls itself a republican paper.

The great American eagle is preening its feathers for a dash into the blue azure the Fourth of next month.

Automobiles are handy articles of travel even for people who can afford to pay double railway fare.

Willie Hearst thinks that he has a majority of the democratic delegates and that they are his to stay.

Party peace and harmony are words with which the administration crowd are not in favor of.

Wisconsin is soon to have a dedication of its own down at the St. Louis Exposition.

The next great thing on the list of attractions is the Democratic convention at St. Louis.

PRESS COMMENT.

Milwaukee Sentinel: The bill of excommunication by which the republican national convention is to be read out of the republican party will not be due until the report of the committee on credentials has been accepted.

Philadelphia Ledger: Some of the Boston papers are making much of the fact that the daughter of a shoe-cutter of Boston, Mass., married a California millionaire the other day. Well, he may be much better than some of the millionaires who are about and she may not rue it.

Racine Times: Crop prospects are improving and in less than a month the national conventions will be over. We may all be happy yet.

Menasha Citizen: It is now reported that Rockefeller is trying to control the mineral output of the United States. What's mine is Rockefeller's.

Appleton Crescent: Five New Jersey girls won husbands by toying with a lawn mower in front of the house evenings. This is one reason why washing the supper dishes is left to ma.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Now that the pickpockets have commenced to operate in Oshkosh it is well enough to remind the people of this city that the best place for their money is in the bank, instead of carrying it around in their clothes.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: Even the Half Breeds were unable to read the handwriting on the wall a few weeks ago, they ought to see it now with their eyes shut.

Madison Journal: There are a good many of La Follette's followers who do not care to mortgage their future by flying in the face of the high court of the party.

Oconomowoc Free Press: "A house divided against itself can not stand." Can the Republican party in the state of Wisconsin afford to keep up this "tempest in a tea pot?" Would it not be well, off-hoover-fashion, to "kiss and make up?"

Menasha Record: The Half Breed Fox River Journal says the Half Breeds never for a moment doubted which faction was the regular Republican party. We believe that, for we never doubted that it was the latter.

Hudson Star-Times: Let it go down into history that the National Republican Committee also unanimously decided that "while St. Croix County was 'regularly' credited it was illegally secured." No public debate is needed to further settle the Baldwin steal.

Tomahawk Tomahawk: An army of many thousands men and boys are at work now on the farms of Wisconsin. It is an army that does good rather than evil. It is an army that replenishes rather than destroys. It is an army that builds up rather than tears down. It adds to the happiness of mankind and entails no misery or distress. This is a land of peace and plenty. Peace is due to the stability and conservatism of our farmers and plenty is due to their industry in tilling the soil adapted to the production of nearly everything that ministers to the well being of mankind.

Chippewa Herald: Attorney Frank Hall of Madison, who has always been a warm friend of Gov. La Follette states that he is in nowise surprised at the action of the national committee. He said at the time that the armory convention was held that it was not legal and that the national committee would hardly ratify it. Mr. Hall was a La Follette district delegate to the national convention. The opinion seems to be gaining, especially among his own followers, that the wisest course for the governor to pursue is to withdraw from the field.

Fond du Lac Reporter: La Follette has now two great opportunities before him, but he is not great enough to grasp either. He might how to the inevitable decision and swing into the for the Cook ticket, basing his action on the manifest good of the party, but he cares nothing for party except as it will serve his own cause. He might turn his forces over to the Democratic party in order to make sure that the state would be saved from the domination of a faction which he claims to believe is so bad all the way through. In the first case his action might be regarded as that of a good party man; in the second it might have the appearance of disinterested patriotism; but party and patriotism both begin and end with La Follette in his estimation.

BOIL THE CARP THEN FRY THEM

New information as to How to Prepare the Drug on the Market.

To the Janesville Gazette: I saw a piece in the paper the other day rather making fun of the carp. I wish to say the carp is a good fish and wish you would tell the people to par-boll the fish and then fry. Yours, A patron, R. W. E.

TEST PROVES BORAX IS BAD

Washington, June 23.—Prof. Wiley has demonstrated beyond all doubt that borax when used as a food preservative is dangerous to health. The agricultural department has issued one of a series of bulletins dealing with the investigation of Prof. Wiley and his squad of "poison eaters."

The bulletin says not sufficient data have been collected to make possible a determination of the question whether the use of borax or boric acid as an external application to cured meats to preserve them in proper condition during shipment to foreign countries should be prohibited. The statement is made, however, that "as it is evident that in cured meats the processes of absorption and diffusion are much restricted, unless the shipment of the product extends over a long period of time, there could be no great penetration of the preservative to the interior of a package."

Causes Loss of Appetite.
Again the report says that "when boric acid or borax equivalent thereto in small quantities not exceeding half a gram a day is given in food, no notable effects are produced immediately. If, however, these small doses be continued for a long while, as, for instance, in one case fifty days, there are occasional periods of loss of appetite, bad feeling, fullness in the head and distress in the stomach. When boric acid or borax in equivalent quantities is given in larger and increasing doses there is a tendency to the development in a more accentuated form of the symptoms above described."

The most common symptom developed is a persistent headache, a sense of fullness in the head, with a clouding to a slight extent, of mental processes. When doses are increased to three grams a day these symptoms are established in the majority of cases, but not in every case. The effect of the administration of borax upon the weight of the body is well marked.

Diminishes Weight.
Its continued use decreases the desire for food and interferes with the digestion of food already in the alimentary canal, and produces in certain cases a persistent headache and bad feeling and discomfort in the region of the stomach. Its final effect in diminishing the weight of the body is not doubtful. "This tendency becomes so well fixed that it is not entirely eliminated for several days after the administration of the preservative ceases."

In the after periods, extending in some cases for ten days, during which time the subject was kept under observation after the administration of the preservative ceased, there was not a uniform nor even a general recovery of original weight and of original condition.

It is not advisable to use borax in those articles of food intended for common and continuous use.

Dangerous to the Sick.
While many individual data obtained are contradictory, the general results of the investigation show in a convincing way that even in doses not exceeding half a gram a day boric acid and borax are prejudicial when consumed for a long time. It is undoubtedly true that no bad effects may be produced upon persons in good health, but the occasional use of preservatives of this kind in small quantities by the young and debilitated and by the sick is dangerous. A safe rule to follow is to exclude these preservatives from food for general consumption.

BOLD HOLD-UP ON HIGH STREET*A FOOTPAD, ATTACKED FUNDY
BURKE NEAR GRAND HOTEL.*FIERCE STRUGGLE ENSUED*Attack Occurred Shortly After Eleven
Last Night—Half Hour Later Police Captured John Arkison.

A fierce encounter with a footpad was what befell Fundy Burke, bartender at Lehighwell's, as he was walking southward on high street at half-past eleven o'clock last evening. Mr. Burke had just passed the door to the sample rooms of the hotel when he saw a man who was approaching slowly on the outer side of the walk suddenly wheel in to meet him, halt, and assume a threatening posture. "I want your money!" said the stranger, raising his arm to strike. Mr. Burke started to pass him when the footpad repeated his declaration and seized one of his arms.

Grapple in Darkness. It was time to do something and Mr. Burke did not let his opportunity pass to seize a hold on his antagonist. The two men grappled in the darkness and for many seconds, neither uttering a sound, they fought for the mastery. Finally Mr. Burke secured a slight advantage and threw the man to the ground, at the same time losing his hold on him. The fellow was up again in the twinkling of an eye but instead of entering the fray again kept his distance and made a motion as if to draw a gun.

John Arkison Captured

Not caring to risk further investigation Mr. Burke hastened to the front door of the hotel, entered, and asked the proprietors for a revolver. Convinced that the man was not armed, else he would have fired, Mr. Burke returned to the scene of the battle just in time to see the footpad making off to the southward as fast as his feet could carry him. Mr. Burke followed him as far as the Congregational church and then returned and reported the matter to the police. Acting Chief Brown and Officer Ewing started on the trail of the highwayman, one of them stationing himself in the shadows near the hotel. Presently, after a half hour had elapsed, Mr. John Arkison, one-time Whitefisher, wanted here for the past year during which time he has kept aloof from Janesville, sauntered along high street and turned onto Milwaukee. As he did so a heavy hand was laid upon his shoulder and a stout cane whistled through the air into position for quelling any resistance. Arkison sized up the situation and assumed an air of injured innocence as his lolling feet were hurried to the jail. The description given by Mr. Burke tallied exactly with the outward "lines" of the prisoner, and he was later identified by the man whom he had attacked.

THE LAW FINDS MANY REASONS*ANSWER TO QUERY AS TO FIRE
CRACKER LAWS.*FOURTH IS THE ONLY DAY*Restrictions Are Being Placed Upon the Small Boy on These Days Also.

To the Editor: Kindly inform your readers if there is or is not an ordinance against the discharge of fire-crackers, toy pistols and the like at any time except on such days as appointed by law. A SUBSCRIBER.

The above request came to the office several days ago and as it required some search through the city ordinances the answer was delayed. Toy pistols are barred forever by the ordinance known as the fire-cracker ordinance, passed last December by the council. A careful search of the ordinances does not reveal that at any time has the small boy the right to fire off fire-crackers or otherwise indulge his patriotic propensities except on the Fourth. At all other times it should be the duty of the police to see that the peace is preserved.

The Ordinance

In No. 75 section 7 the following ordinance is found: No person shall fire or discharge any cannon, gun, pistol or firearm within the city limits without first having obtained the permission of the common council. This is interpreted to include fire-crackers under the title of firearms and cannon. This last December another ordinance known as the fire-cracker ordinance which was bitterly fought in the council was passed and became a law. This famous ordinance reads as follows:

Fire-Cracker Ordinance

Sec. 1. The sale or offering for sale or firing of cannon, fire-crackers or any fire-crackers more than one-half inch in diameter, or toy pistols within the city limits is hereby prohibited. There is a fine attached of not less than five dollars and not more than fifty for each offense.

CHAPTER VII.

A YOUNG LADY BUYS A LOAD OF HAY.

AS the magistrate given his decision yet?" asked Alma Jurneff as she met Orderly Alexander Horse in the corridor of the living rooms a few days after the trial.

"No decision has been made public, Mlle. Jurneff. There is much secrecy. There is to be a squad of prisoners sent to Siberia in a month. I believe the American is numbered among them."

"Siberia! They would not dare! To send an innocent American to Siberia would bring on war."

"Not if he died," said Alexander, with a shrug. "Some who are numbered for Siberia never start. They die before the time comes. Hush! Here comes Colonel Jurneff!"

He walked away without saluting her, and her face was devoid of expression when her eyes met those of her uncle.

"I have news for you," he said, closely observing the girl. "The governor is to give a ball to Prince Delnikoff. The prince will arrive in a few days. He will attend to his own official duties while here, and the governor wishes to entertain him."

"There is no objection, is there? What are the new duties of the prince?"

"He has been appointed Inspector-general of prisons for Stavropol, Tiflis and Astrakhan. It was probably through the influence of the general, your father, that he obtained this important post. I received a letter from your father today. Would you like to read it?"

"I will read it if you wish," answered Alma listlessly.

"It will save me the trouble of repeating his wishes to you. Take the letter to your room and study it. Consider well its contents. You will profit by meeting your father's wishes in this matter. You have been severely punished, I know, by your semi-imprisonment here. Hereafter I am going to permit you to have your own way. I want you to meet the prince at the ball. It may be necessary for you to make purchases. You are at liberty to use the carriage any day between 2 and 4."

"Thank you," said Alma. She bowed and went to her room.

"Some plot," she murmured as she shut her door. "What devilry is afoot now? So I am asked to read a letter from my father, the first of his letters that have been even spoken of to me."

She sat down and read:

My Dear Brother—You will doubtless be surprised to hear of the appointment of Prince Delnikoff to the important post of Inspector-general of prisons. It was a happy thought of mine to have him appointed to a position of power and importance, sufficiently so to please him and make his return in your portion of Russia not uneventful. It will bring him often to Tiflis and give you an opportunity to bring the prince and my unfortunate daughter together. It is probable that the governor will entertain the prince. If so, that will be a good opportunity. We must compel the girl to obey some way or other. It is a cherished idea of mine to see the families of Delnikoff and Jurneff united. The father of Prince Alexis was a good friend of mine, and we spoke frequently in other days of the pleasure it would give us to see our only children united. There are no other children, and this is the most desirable marriage. I shall not receive my daughter again until she comes to me as the Princess Delnikoff.

"What a kind and loving father!" exclaimed Alma as she crunched the letter in her hand. "This is a threat—a threat that my uncle preferred to have me read rather than to tell me himself. Let them threaten! But I will attend the ball and will assist in entertaining Prince Delnikoff, the most dissolute prince in St. Petersburg."

"Have you received a letter at last, mademoiselle?" asked Marie as she entered the room.

"At last, Marie, I have been permitted to read a letter. It is not, however, addressed to me. It is one that was sent by my father to my uncle with some very interesting news. Prince Delnikoff is coming to Tiflis."

"Heavens! To be married?"

"I presume that is the real object. Openly he comes as the Inspector-general of prisons."

"Inspector-general! He will be a proud one in that uniform. "Why so, Marie? What distinguishes uniform does the Inspector-general of prisons wear?"

"All gold lace, mademoiselle. It is fine. I once knew the Inspector-general of prisons for Perm. He was a grand looking man in his uniform."

"I should like to see it," said Alma, with a smile. "I suppose I will have the opportunity soon."

"I have a book with all the uniforms of Russia. Shall I get it?"

"No, never mind. Well, get it. It will serve to pass away a few miserable moments."

Marie brought a little leather covered book.

"It is Alexander's, mademoiselle. He hopes for promotion and is studying the fine uniform he will wear."

"Alexander is noble and faithful. I hope he will win his promotion and not disgrace himself by assisting me."

"He would die for you, mademoiselle."

Alma turned the pages of the book. Many of the brilliant uniforms she saw pictured were familiar to her. The uniform prescribed for the Inspector-general of prisons was a gorgeous affair, all gold lace, shiny boots, a cap and a medal that hung from the golden sash. She closed the book and gazed back in the chair with her eyes closed. Instead of returning the book

Alma rose from her chair and placed it in a drawer.

"I like to look at them, Marie," she said. "I will keep the book awhile."

The approach of the governor's ball in honor of the new Inspector-general of prisons roused great interest. A governor's ball was always a grand affair, but this one, coming at the close of the fair, with so many notables from all parts of the east in Tiflis, was certain to surpass in splendor any of its predecessors. The bazaars brought out their best goods and displayed them to the best advantage. Women of all nations began feverish shopping and preparing. Officers of the garrison, Persian grandees, Chinese princes, Turkish pashas, vied with one another in their efforts to do credit to this great occasion. Alma seemed imbued with the same spirit of rivalry. One day as she and Marie were going out Jurneff stopped Marie.

"Marie," he said, "what has brought the great change over your mistress? Heretofore she has been morose and sad; now she is smiling and cheerful. What has caused it? She acts like one who knew that her lover had come to see her."

Marie started. Did he know that Alma was aware of the presence of Irons in the prison?

"It is not that, I think, Colonel Jurneff, but that perhaps one is coming."

"Do you mean—you cannot mean the prince?"

"It may be, though Mlle. Alma says little to me. Is he not a great officer?"

"He has a high and honorable position. He is Inspector-general of prisons."

"Ah! That enlightens me, your excellency. I know what she wanted it for now."

"The book—the pictures of uniforms. I saw her studying the uniform of the Inspector-general of prisons. She seemed pleased after that."

Jurneff turned away.

"What was there in the general's letter to produce this change?" he asked himself. "It is remarkable. I can now write to him that he is in a fair way to have his dearest wish gratified. I ought to be promoted myself if that comes off."

"What did my uncle ask you, Marie?" inquired Alma as the carriage was being driven off.

"He had noticed that you were gay and smiling of late. He asked me the cause. I said I believed it was because the prince was coming. I told him you had studied the uniforms of the Inspector-general of prisons and had seemed pleased."

"I must be cautious."

Arriving at one of the largest bazaars, Alma left Marie in the carriage and proceeded to do her shopping alone. She was attired becomingly, her gown setting off her form to advantage. Among the things she purchased was a long cloak, reaching almost to the ground, having a hood for covering the head in winter.

"Permit me, lady, to carry your purchases to your carriage," said the merchant.

"You may, but not yet. I shall need some more things. I am going to a cafe for lunch and shall wear my new hood and cloak. These Persians and Turks stare at one so. When I return, I shall make more purchases."

"I will await your return with impatience, lady, and your goods will remain in my charge."

Not even Marie noticed the cloaked figure that came from the bazaar. A drosky was standing near, and Alma stepped into it.

"Take me to the hay wharfs," she said.

The troika started, but the money that was put into his hand was many times the regular charge, and he did not hesitate.

The hay wharfs on the Kur were in themselves part of the show. Boats of all descriptions crowded against one another, for the supply of hay needed during the fair for the horses and camels was very great. The shouts of Circassians, Georgians and Turks and Persians were deafening.

Alma sat in her drosky and looked about at the busy scene. These hay-boats were mostly from the towns along the upper Kur and the Volga. They were of all kinds, sizes and degrees of safety. Those from the Volga were the largest, for they needed stability to travel on the Caspian. Near one of these, with an Astrakhan owner and crew, she halted.

No subjects of the czar hate the Muscovite rule more than the Astrakhans. It was only after a prolonged war that Astrakhan was subdued, and her fealty has never been more than nominal. Every little while some new nobles rise to preach a holy war, and a new crusade against the Muscovite begins.

The Astrakhan, seated upon the prow of his boat, was tall, dark and picturesque. He was smoking a pipe, regarded the proximity of several tons of hay belonging to himself.

As he looked around he saw a small white finger beckoning him. He sauntered to where Alma sat. She got down from her seat and spoke in whispers.

"Are you not from the lower valley of the Volga?"

"I am, sweet lady. I have come from Astrakhan with hay to sell."

"Is it sold?"

"Alas, not yet. The fair is breaking up, and there is less demand for hay."

"Will you sell it at a good price and deliver it where I command?"

"If the price be sufficient, sweet lady, I will carry it to Moscow."

"What is the price you get for your hay at this wharf?"

"This load will bring me 300 rubles."

"If you will take a passenger, keep your tongue still and deliver the hay where I bid you, I will give you 2,000 rubles."

"It is a fortune, sweet lady! Where shall I deliver the hay?"

"At the port of Astrakhan, Persia."

"I agree. But the passenger?"

"Is a man. Remain at this spot until he is ready."

"Under the cover of my hay he will be safe. Sweet lady, you may rely upon me. I am Churka of the town of Astrakhan. Ask for me when you want me. I am at your feet."

"Return to the bazaar from which I came," said Alma to the troika.

"I am growing reckless," she mused. "Two weeks ago I delivered if I had to look my uncle in the face. I dared not go a step beyond the limits set. But now! The blood of the Jurneffs is aroused."

Arriving at the bazaar, she made another purchase, walked to the carriage, answered Marie's question as to what kept her so long and in half an hour was back in her apartments.

As Colonel Jurneff passed her door he stopped, a look of astonishment on his face.

"What next?" he said. "She is actually singing a love song. Evidently my brother has not managed this affair well. Why, the girl is already happy as well as conquered. Really my brother's influence must get me promoted. I am too great a diplomat to be governor of a prison. I should be in St. Petersburg."

As his footsteps died away the love song came to an abrupt end.

"Are you not from the lower valley of the Volga?"

Where Baseball Reigns

The Splendid Work and Strong Personnel of the Cincinnati Nationals. Kelley, Harper and "Noodles" Hahn—Talk of the Game.

Captain-Manager Joe Kelley's tribe of Cincinnati Reds have been playing a sensational quality of baseball this season. New York and Chicago, their immediate rivals for first honors, have had the task of their lives in holding the Cincinnati in check at various times.

"The pennant for ours" is the slogan of the Kelleyites, and they are fighting of baseball's good name. They will be supported by the better element among the players and public in any measure, however drastic, for the suppression of rowdiness wherever it appears. It is only necessary for them to mete out punishment with an impartial hand, no matter on whom it falls nor how seriously it may affect any manager or team, to insure their retaining that support.

There seems to be less real occasion for kicking by players this season than heretofore. Thus far the umpiring seen in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and New York has been of a higher order than for the same period of time at the opening of any other season. The fact that the games are getting closer as the teams become equalized with the help of the foul strike rule is a prolific cause of kicking, of course.

Sometimes it indicates a praiseworthy desire on the part of the men to win games. There are several ways of kicking on decisions, and not all of them are objectionable. It is only the kind that offends the public by insult or by delaying the game that needs to be looked after most carefully. The short, sharp kick over a close decision never hurts the game if it goes no further.

and many ladies were present. Early Work 10:28 a. m.—Chairman Cannon called the convention to order. Rev. Thaddeus Salvey opened the session with a prayer; at ten-thirty roll-call for nominations began. Alabama, first on the list, yielded the honor to New York. Former Governor Black proceeded to the platform to nominate Roosevelt and is greeted by cheers.

Wild Scene At 11:05 a. m. Black's concluding words in nomination of Roosevelt brought the convention to its feet. The delegates stood on the seats wildly cheering and waving flags. Cannon advanced to the platform with an old tattered flag, which simply set the crowd wild. A large picture of Roosevelt was held aloft from the platform; red, white and blue umbrellas, bearing Roosevelt's picture, were waved amidst the flags. The galleries arose and joined in the demonstration. The New York delegation marched around the hall, followed by California, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Ohio.

Big Demonstrations The demonstration lasted about twenty-three minutes. At eleven-thirty Senator Beveridge was recognized to second the nomination. He was warmly welcomed, in speech endorsing the convention. The statement "No mystery" will ever be elected president was an evident reference to Parker and caught the crowd.

Another Scene As Beveridge concluded his speech there was another demonstration at the mention of Roosevelt's name. George A. Knight of California was recognized and seconded Roosevelt's nomination. At the conclusion of Knight's speech the entire California delegation proceeded to escort him back to his seat. Harry Stilwell Edwards of Georgia was then introduced to second the nomination. He was followed by ex-Gov. Bradley of Kentucky. After Bradley had concluded his eulogy on Roosevelt Joseph B. Cotton of Minnesota recognized by the audience and was loudly welcomed.

Roll Call At one-eleven a roll call is ordered for the nomination. New Jersey moved to nominate by acclamation, but the convention yelled "No" and the roll call continued.

Is Nominated 1:21 p. m.—The roll call is finished, every vote in the convention being cast for Roosevelt. He is declared the nominee.

Fairbanks Nominated 1:25 p. m.—The roll is called for the nominations for vice-president. Alabama yields the floor to Senator Dolliver who makes the speech nominating Senator Fairbanks. The mention of Fairbanks' name is the signal for a great demonstration. Depew, Foraker, ex-Senator Carter of Montana, and Gov. Pennypacker seconded Fairbanks' nomination, on the motion of Senator Dolliver, Chairman Cannon is appointed the chairman of the committee to notify President Roosevelt of his nomination, and Root is chairman of the committee to notify Mr. Fairbanks. Roosevelt will be notified July 27th; Fairbanks on August 3d.

Closing Scene Senator Heyburn of Idaho offered a resolution thanking the officers of the convention. Gov. Murphy of New Jersey offered a resolution thanking the city of Chicago. At 2:25 the convention adjourned sine die on motion of Graeme Stewart of Illinois.

Is Notified Washington, June 23.—President Roosevelt received the news of his nomination while at luncheon with his family on the south porch of the white house. The president was not overwhelmingly surprised at the news and finished his meal with due equanimity. On his return to his office he received the congratulations of the newspaper men there and of the government officials who called later. Assistant Secretary of State Louis was the first to present felicitations.
